Architecture and art students who are interested in turning their ideas and work into a successful, multi-faceted enterprise are encouraged to attend this talk.

Situ Studio was founded in Brooklyn in 2003, while its five partners were studying architecture at the Cooper Union. Situ is committed to engaging critical, social, and technological issues at the intersection of architecture and a variety of other disciplines.

In its first year as a full-time venture, Situ has worked on a broad range of projects for both public and private clients. Among them, an award-winning memorial for the victims of American Airlines Flight 587 in Rockaway, Queens and a large outdoor exhibition for a green energy, arts and education center at Stuyvesant Cove Park on Manhattan's East River. Most recently, Situ was awarded a NYSCA grant to conduct a research and mapping project on the changing U.S. border. For more information, consult their Web site: <http://www.situstudio.com>
